THE JEWELLISTS OF THE

At the Army Rifle Association Meeting Instructor Churcher (in the center)
Sergeant-Major Wallingford
Sergeant Musketry-Instructor All three men are on the
of the

8, who
the finest
the British greatest shot
his com-
to New Zea-
and which almost proved mortal, relates with pride some of Captain Wallingford's exploits. In a letter home, it may be remembered that this officer wrote that after several weeks at the front that day was the first on which he had not killed a Turk. This man left the front on June 27, and he claims that Captain Wallingford's 'tally' up to that time with the rifle alone, leaving out of account altogether the terrible machine-gun, was over 700. As a marksman he is a wizard. One incident this soldier related. "Do you see that bush there?" said Captain Wallingford one day, pointing to a harmless looking bush about 60 yards away.
"Well watch it." They watched, and saw that it moved very slowly. "I think we'll give him a chance," said Captain Wallingford, which meant that instead of using his rifle he would use a revolver. He drew his revolver and fired quick as a flash. The animated bush collapsed, and the Turk that it hid rolled over quite dead. On another occasion Captain Wallingford played one of his practical jokes on the Turks in the opposing trenches. "I think we'll make the beggars waste some ammunition presently," he said. Then he passed the word that when he shouted an order the company was to fire five rounds rapid, and then stop. As the narrator tells: 'We fired our five rounds rapid in five seconds or so, and they kept on firing for an hour and a quarter expecting us to attack. We stayed snug in our trench of course.' Afterwards Captain Wallingford said, 'I guess we've got more ammunition left than they have.' This joke was practised very often with good effect in the first months, but now the Turk is more wary, and probably ammunition is more scarce."

MAJOR J.A WALLINGFORD (1872-1944)

Jesse Wallingford, one of New Zealand's greatest War heroes, was born in Kent, England in 1872. He was educated in Military schools and entered the Army at age 13. He specialised in musketry and was appointed an instructor at the Hythe Musketry School. He was 17 times a member of the British team at Bisley Championship and a champion with both the rifle and revolver many times over. In 1908 he won a Bronze medal at the London Olympics in the teams Free Pistol event.

In 1911 Wallingford was brought to NZ by Sir Joseph Ward (Prime Minister and Minister of Defence) to head up the School of Musketry in Auckland. He was responsible for training the Expeditionary Force in rifle practice.

While famous throughout the British Empire prior to The Great War, it was his exploits at Gallipoli that would earn him the nickname 'Human Machine Gun' and the title 'Hero of ANZAC'. Wallingford was put in charge of the NZ machine guns and snipers and was awarded the Military Cross during operations near Gaba Tepe on the 25th April.

Widely renowned as the best shot in the British Military he was regularly used to dispatch Turkish snipers. Not counting the machine gun, he shot over 700 Turks in the 5 months he was at Gallipoli. At the end of August he was evacuated due to a heart problem.

He returned to New Zealand and held various staff post in the Auckland district until his retirement in 1927. From 1929 he was Superintendant at the Veterans home in Mount Roskill.

187 - MANTON & SON FOWLING PIECE

A very nice high quality double barrel percussion fowling piece by John Marton & Son of London circa 1844, 32" 12 bore barrels with brass end ramrod, marked John Marton & Son Dover Street London on the rib and the serial number with London proof marks underneath. There is a small section of engraving at the breech extending to the tang and platinum plugs. The barrels retain most overall brown and are in ExC with a small section of pinpricking near the muzzle on one of the barrels. The action is marked JOHN MANTON & SON PATENT and is engraved with foliage and bird designs. The steel trigger guard extends to a pineapple finial at the front and spear shape at the rear and is engraved with pheasants and dog scene. ExC walnut stock that is chequered at the wrist. Vacant silver escucheon on the tang as well as pineapple finial at the front. The steel butt plate extends in to the stock and is also engraved. Contained in its original green baize lined case with original trade label. Inside the case is its Hawksley ribbed type flask and leather shot bag as well as nipple key and patch cutter, cleaning rod and equipment. A very nice high grade fowling piece by one of the worlds great makers. VGWO&C NLR

188 - BARBAR FLINTLOCK PISTOLS

An exquisite pair of silver mounted holster pistols by James Barbar circa 1766, 9" 20 bore round steel barrels carved at the breech extending to rococo design thumb pieces. The barrels are marked BARBER and have London view and proof marks as well as Barbar's makers mark. The lock plates are typical of his style, plain with rounded surfaces and curved point toward the butt. The cocks are of a simple elegant design and engraved with borderline and small floral motifs. The one piece walnut stocks are relief carved around the lock plates and have shell pattern carving on the tangs. The stocks are flared at the butts and have silver grotesque masks, mounts, eschucheons, back plates and ram rod guides. The mounts are silver hallmarked for John King 1766 of London. Triggerguards are of elliptical shape and extend into shell and flower finials. The lock plates and mounts have foliate and shell pattern designs. The original ram rods are whale bone with flared walnut tips capped in steel. An almost identical pair of pistols are pictured in Dixons book - Georgian Pistols. A unique opportunity for the advanced collector to purchase a nice untouched pair of mid 18th century pistols by one of Londons best makers, renowned for making well balanced pistols of the highest quality.
